Manager Stengel and his Staff

There are just about no superlatives left to describe the record of winners compiled by Manager Casey Stengel. Going into the 1958 season, Stengel and the Late Miller Huggins were tied in pennant winners, with eight each. Now the tie is broken. No other Manager in baseball history ever won nine league championships in ten years.

Success as a manager didn't come to Casey in his earlier big league ventures, so no one can begrudge him his successes of the last decade. Before his investiture as the field boss of the Yankees, he had had nine years of managerial experience in the National League and never could get together the club to make a first division experience. "It pays to be a Yankee".

HOUK

Yankee-brand baseball is taught by the coaches under Casey Stengel. And well it may be called Yankee-brand, since each of the three coaches played as members of the Bombers. Frank Crossetti, performing as third base coach, has been with the Yankees 27 years as player or coach. In eighteen of those years he has participated in the World Series, an all-time record. Coaches Turner and Houk have each had earlier tours of duty as minor league managers in the Yankee farm system, after completing their big league playing careers with the club. Turner has completed ten seasons as the pitching coach for the Yanks. Houk, who came to Stengel's staff last year as the successor to Bill Dickey, had previously served as coach and player, understudying Yogi Berra, in 1953 and 1954.

BRAVE CRASHERS . . . these four heavy batsmen for the Braves lined up in a workout session day before Series opened. Left to right: Covington, Adcock, Aaron and Mathews.

SAME FACES, NEW SCENE . . . Starting pitchers for first game of 1958 World Series, Warren Spahn and Whitey Ford shake hands in Milwaukee. The year before they faced each other similarly but in New York.

World Series 1958

After the last four World Series, the Bronx contingent wouldn't mind having a new script writer. For four consecutive years, all of them with the Yankees as the American League representatives, the issue has been decided only after the playing of the full seven games. On two of the occasions, the Yankees were in the winner's circle after the final contest.

The victory of 1958 was a particularly notable one. Only once before in the history of World Series' play had any club been down three games to one and come back to sweep the next three games, to win the Series. And, to do it this last October, the Champs had to do it the hard way, in the other club's park.

Another nemesis fell along the way, too. After winning three games from the Yanks in 1957, and then his first outing again in 1958, the New Yorkers caught up with Lew Burdette and stung him twice in the remaining games.

Two new Series heroes were unveiled by the Yanks in 1958. Bob Turley appeared in four of the games and was a tower of determination in producing the Yank victory. Elston Howard came into his place in the sun, left field, and turned the tide on no less than four occasions with catches, throws or base hits.

It was a story-book Series, and the Yanks emerged for what they are . . . THE CHAMPS.

SERIES OPENER . . . this shot shows one part of the crowd that watched the 1958 Series begin in Milwaukee.

SERIES SPECTATORS . . . Mickey Mantle is giving a ball to Robin Kuenn who attended Series opener with her father, Tiger Harvey Kuenn.

FIRST GAME LEAD . . . Hank Bauer has just hit a long one into County Stadium bleachers and it gave the Yanks first game lead, 3-2. Braves won this one 4-3 in tenth.

LAST OF A JINX . . . ball is handed to Lew Burdette at close of second game of Series, after he had beaten Yanks 13-5 to post his fourth consecutive win over the Bombers over two Series.

SLIPS THAT PASS . . . Red Schoendienst passes Berra, as does the ball. However, Don Larsen was backing up play and Red was out trying to get back to third.

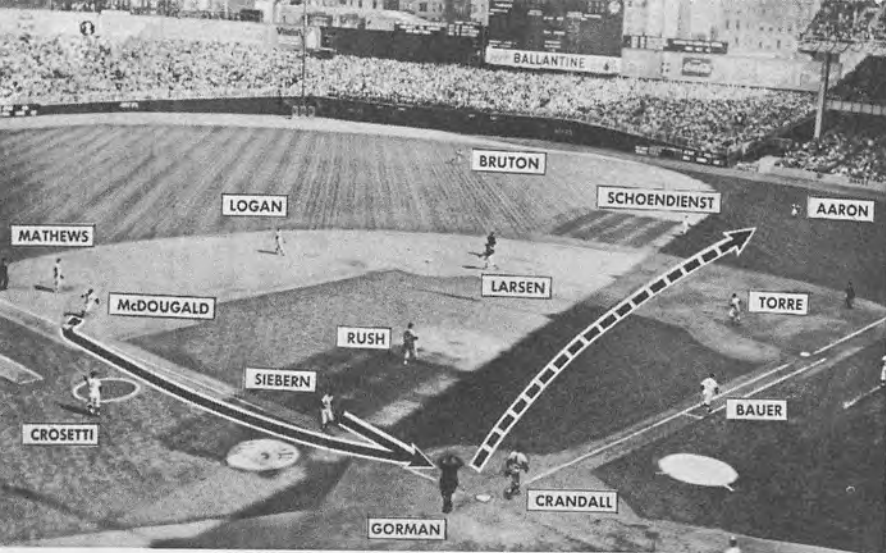

IN THE STRETCH . . . Hank Bauer tried to reach up to Hank Aaron's double and crashed into fence. Action was in first game of Series.

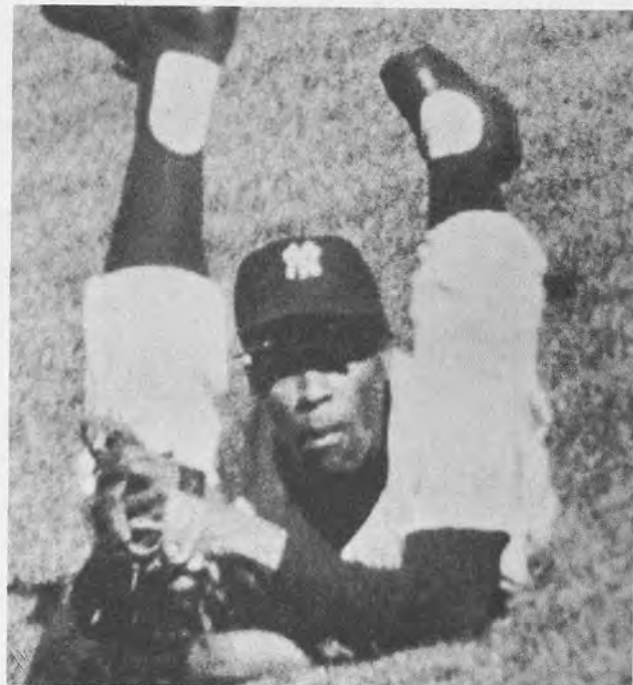

ONLY POOR PERFORMANCE . . . mound meeting was held by Yankees Stengel, Berra and Turley during second game of Series, won by Braves, 13-5. Turley was taken out here, but went on to be the pitching star of Series.

YANKS REGAIN THE TOUCH . . . after losing first two games, Yanks got these two runs in third game to lead 2-0 and finally win game 4-0. Bauer singled here with bases loaded.

EPIC CATCH . . . Elston Howard's catch, sprawling and tumbling, ended up in double-play when Bruton couldn't get back to first. This was in the fifth game of the Series and represented just about the last Brave threat.

LOW BRIDGE . . . Moose Skowron drops to ground to give Whitey Ford throwing room after Eddie Mathews' bunt was caught. Ford is trying to double up Brave who was on first.

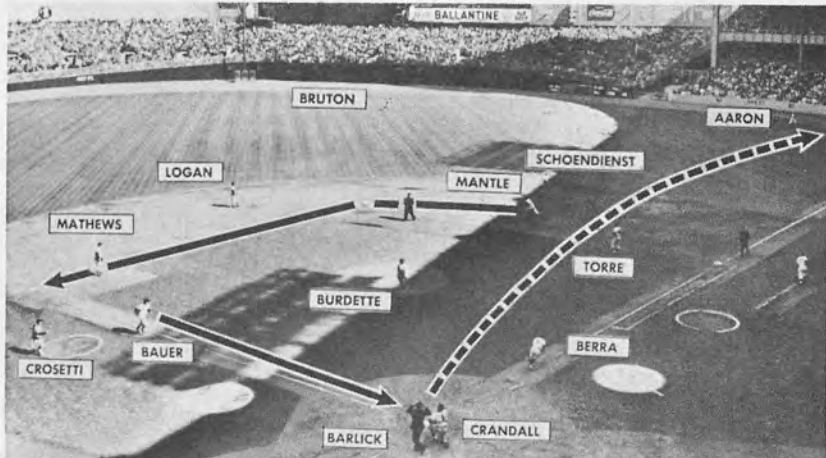

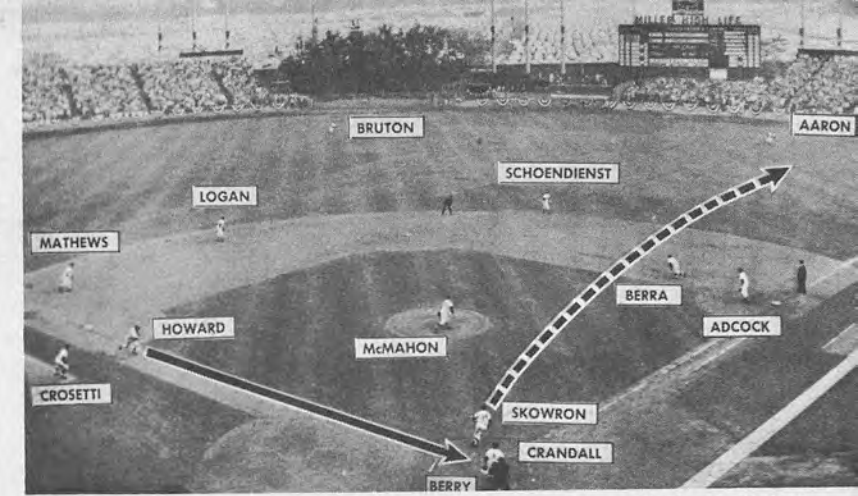

PICK-OFF PICTURE . . . Red Schoendienst manages to get back to bag ahead of attempted pick-off. Waiting for throw is Tony Kubek.

FAIR BALL . . . Umpire Tom Gorman signals that Aaron's hit down third base is in play as Bobby Richardson has to wave it past. Bit took place in fourth game.

BIG INNING . . . Yogi Berra's double drives in Hank Bauer in sixth inning of fifth game. Yanks went on to total six runs in the inning and win game 7-0.

ONLY ONE TO GO . . . Moose Skowron's single to right drives in Howard to score lead run in tenth inning of sixth game. Yanks won 4-3.

SIXTH GAME BATTERY . . . Whitey Ford and Yogi Berra get together before going out to hold the fort in the sixth game of the Series.

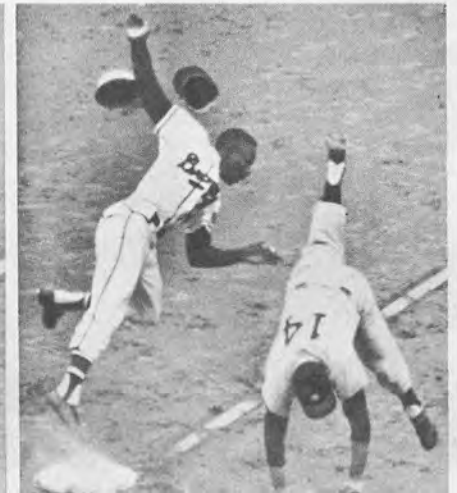

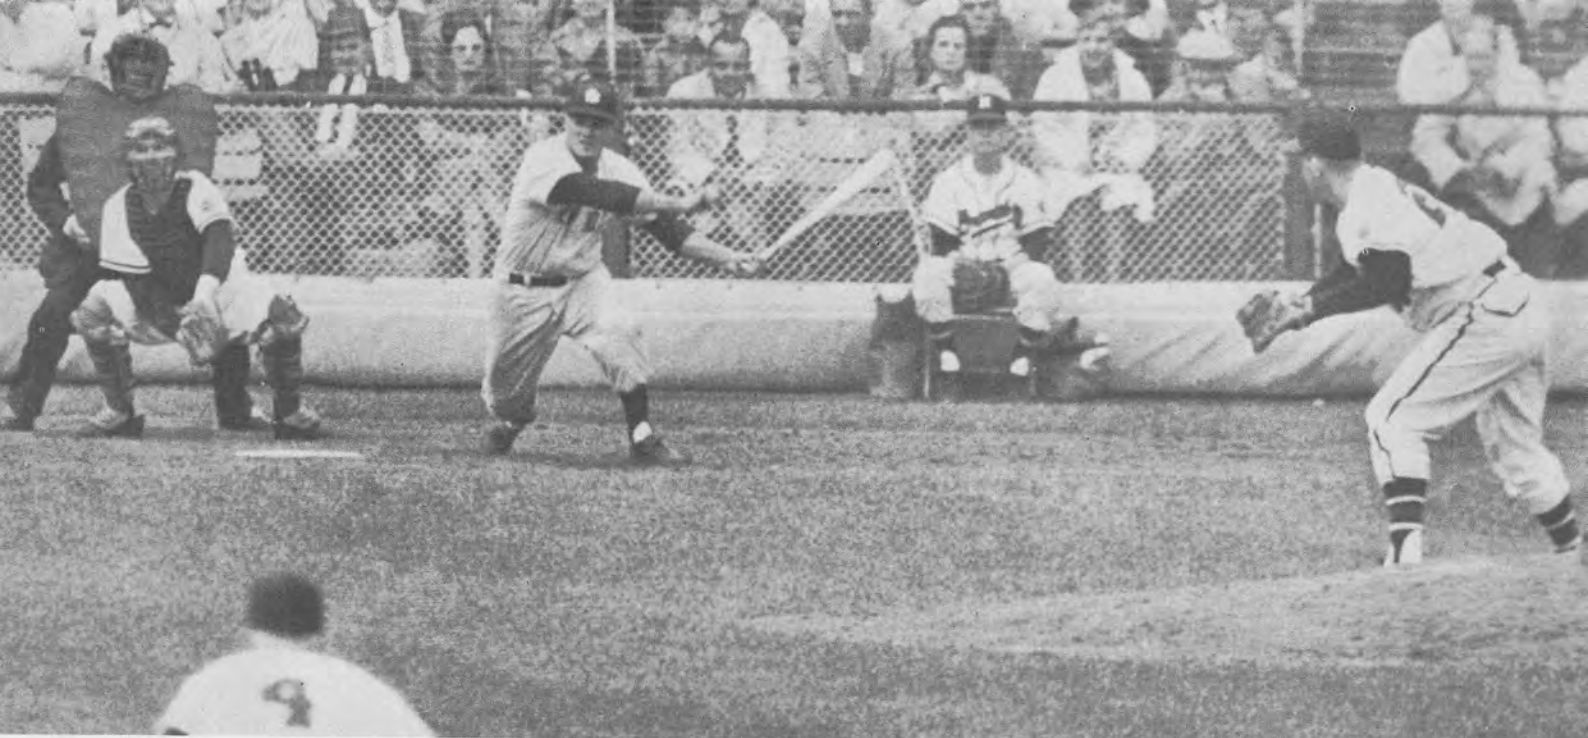

OUT AT HOME . . . Andy Pafko is tagged out by Berra when he attempts to score after Howard caught Logan's fly in left. The double play ended Brave threat in sixth game.

THE END'S IN SIGHT . . . Gil McDougald has just belted tenth-inning homer in sixth game, which Yanks won 4-3 to tie Series at three apiece.

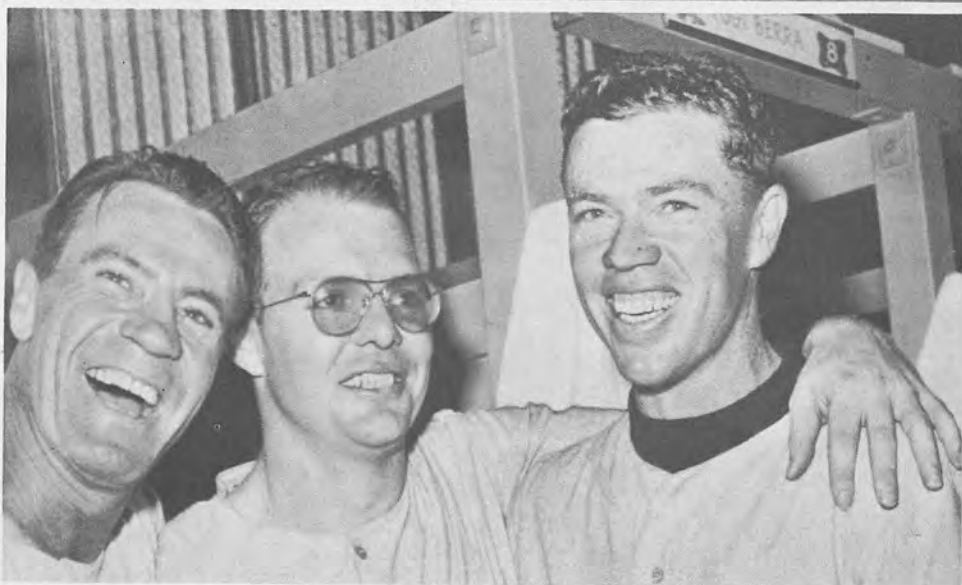

SPILLS AND THRILLS . . . ball, Hank Aaron and Moose Skowron all arrived at first together, in third inning of sixth game.

AS BRAVES SAW THE END . . . this is how the Braves had to look at the Skowron single that wrapped up the 1958 World Series, won by Yanks, seventh game, 4-3.

HE SHOULD HAVE PAID FOR HIS SEAT . . . Moose Skowron makes great effort to take foul pop from Johnny Logan's bat.

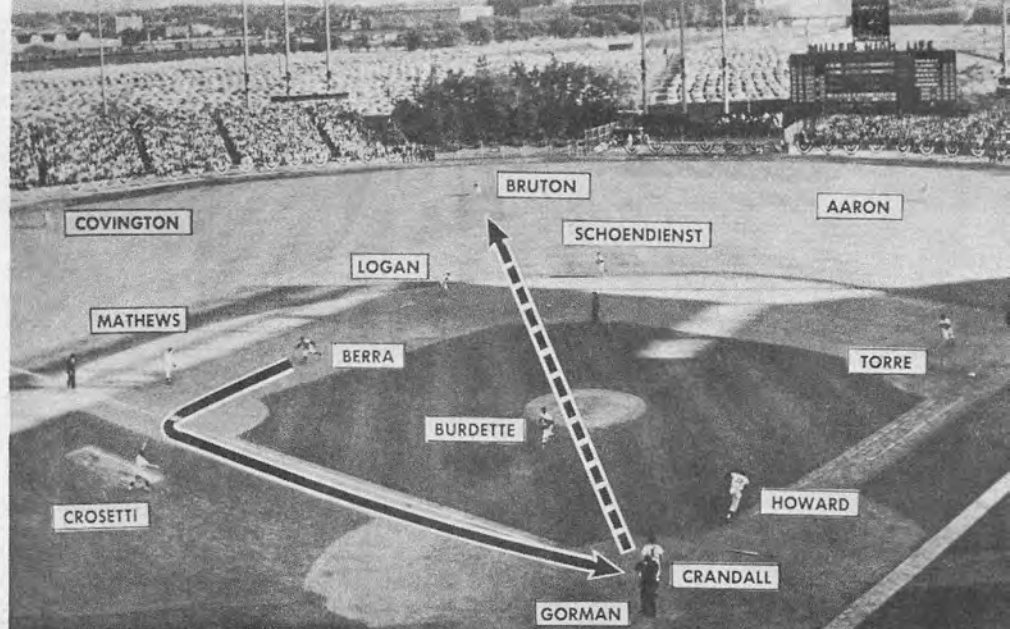

EVEN UP . . . three Yankee heroes in sixth game win to tie 1958 Series at 3-3. Hank Bauer, who homered; Ryne Duren, winning pitcher; Gil McDougald, who hit tenth inning homer in 4-3 win.

IN THE GROOVE . . . Gil McDougald, with back to infield, takes pop-up in last game of Series. Looks as if Bauer could have taken it, too.

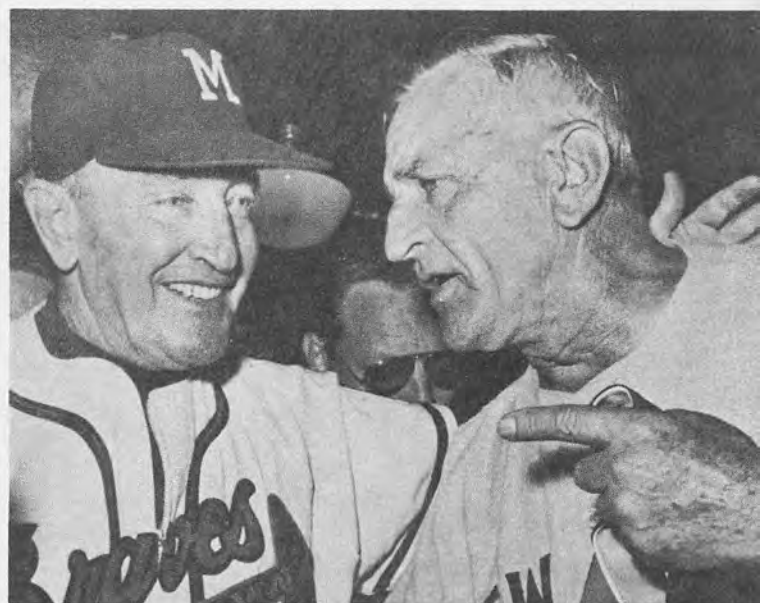

THE WINNING RUN OF THE SERIES . . . solid line indicates route of Yogi Berra on way to scoring the run that put Yanks ahead 3-2 in final game. Howard got the hit and Yanks were never headed again.

THE LINE FORMS . . . behind all of those jubilant Yankees is Bob Turley who had just finished off the Milwaukee Braves in the final 1958 World Series game.

CHAMP, AGAIN . . . Manager Stengel is receiving the congratulations of the Braves' Fred Haney after the final game of the 1958 Series.

EVERYBODY MOVE . . . Yogi Berra is set to pounce on attempted bunt by Covington, who was trying to push Aaron over to second in last game of Series.

BOB TURLEY

BORN: Sept. 19, 1930 at Troy, Illinois.
WINTER ADDRESS: Lutherville, Md. HEIGHT:
6' 2". WEIGHT: 215. BATS and throws right.
Married, two children. Brown hair, blue eyes.

The early predictions made for "Bullet Bob" really came true last year. On top of his great improvement during 1957, Turley came along in 1958 to become the first 20-game winner for the Yankees since 1954. This statistic alone put Bob in a solo class last season, as the entire American League failed to produce any other 20-game winner.

To produce his total of twenty-one wins last summer, Turley became the pitcher the Yanks have wanted . . . he had nineteen complete game efforts over the course of the campaign. Not much work for the bull-pen in that class of hurling.

Turley spent a good bit of this past off-season collecting the awards that go along with being the outstanding player in major league baseball. Among those plaques were two of particular note. In the first place, he received the Hickok Belt for 1958, symbolic of the Top Professional Athlete of the year. Among baseball players alone, he was awarded the Cy Young Trophy, representing recognition as the leading pitcher in the majors for 1958.

If the exploits of this great competitor during the regular season were not great enough for all of these plaudits, one had only to see the record he posted in the 1958 World Series. After a miserable first effort, Bob became the Yanks stopper for the rest of the way. He appeared in four of the last six games; in the last three games consecutively. Over those four appearances he held the Braves to only five runs total.

All of the above isn't a bad record for a fellow who is supposed to have been a bonus player for the amount of $500.00, when he was first signed by the old St. Louis Browns.

MICKY MANTLE

BORN: Oct. 20, 1931 at Spavinaw, Okla.
WINTER ADDRESS: Dallas, Texas. HEIGHT: 5' 11". WEIGHT: 196. Switch hitter, throws right. Married, three children. Blonde hair, gray eyes.

The big man in the Yankee howitzer corps didn't come close to winning the triple crown in 1958, but he recovered one of the most coveted laurels in the game, when he annexed the American League home-run leadership, with 42. He has now held that honor three of the past four seasons. While regaining this peak, he garnered the league tops in total bases and in runs scored (this latter honor having been his for three years running now).

Opposing American League hurlers don't do anything to help the powerful Mick to any batting records. During 1958 they put him on base with walks intentionally thirteen times and his total bases on balls exceeded 100, the only batter in the league to exceed that number.

Since Mickey came up to the Yanks so early, it's hard to believe some of the career statistics he already is accumulating. However, after only eight seasons as a major leaguer, he is second only to Babe Ruth in the number of World Series homeruns produced.

On the way to what would be a great season for just about any other ball player, Mantle gathered in one club record he would be glad to relinquish. His 120 strike-outs tied him for the lead last summer, but gave him undisputed ownership of that set of horns for the Yankees, lifetime.

SPEED-UP . . . Mickey concentrated like this when he scores from third after the catch of a short fly ball. Gus Triandos waits vainly for ball.

Married, three children. Blonde hair, blue eyes.

Despite a siege of arm miseries again during 1958, the "dean" of the Yankee pitching corps can still be proud of two outstanding records. He leads all active American League hurlers in percentage of victories vs. losses, and he has the lowest career ERA among present A.L. marksmen. These two league statistics have become almost the personal property of the New York lefty. Last summer marked the fifth straight year he had posted an ERA below 3.00, and that makes for a life-time record of 2.59.

Even though Whitey didn't get in a full season of work last summer, it was a definite improvement over 1957. His summer's work added up to almost 100 more innings pitched than the previous year, with 66 more strike-outs while adding only nine walks.

If the statistics that the peerless southpaw turned in last summer add up to arm trouble, watch out when he gets in shape.

LARRY BERRA

BORN: May 12, 1925 at St. Louis, Mo. WINTER ADDRESS: Tenaflly, N. J. HEIGHT: 5' 8". WEIGHT: 192. BATS left, throws right. Married, three children. Black hair, brown eyes.

Baseball fans who keep scrapbooks on their favorites had better start getting additional pages to put in the "BERRA BOOK". At the rate the Yank backstop-outfielder keeps adding to his personal statistics, he is likely to have the book rewritten before he retires.

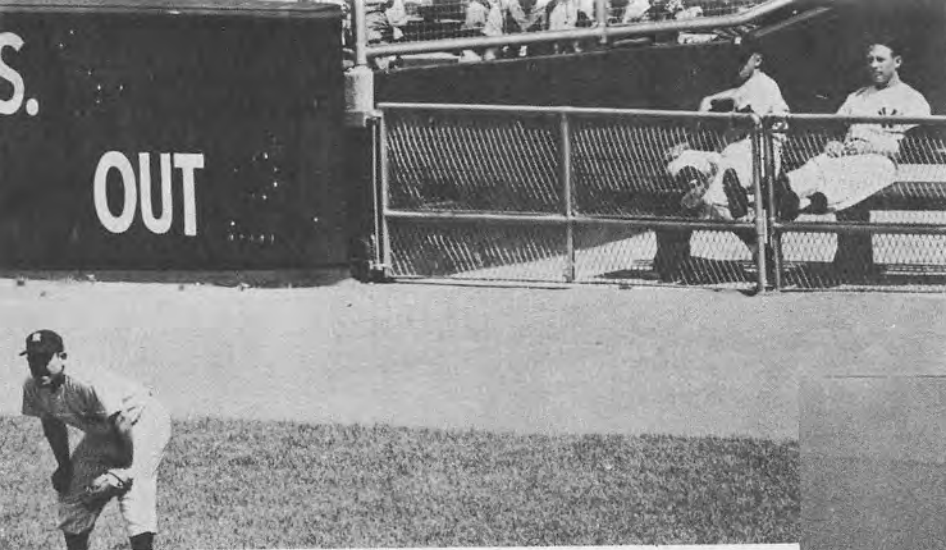

Latest "all-time" figure to be added to the string was the home-run title for major league catchers in a career. Of his lifetime total of HR's, 273 were hit while acting as a catcher, passing all of his opposition. Before the 1958 World Series began, Yogi already held the mark of playing in the greatest number of Series contests. When the Yanks closed out the Braves in the seventh game last Fall, he had added seven games to that streak, while catching every inning of the post-season series. Already the holder of the record of the greatest number of hits for any player in World Series play, Berra added six to that total last October.

While hitting honors continue to pile up on the fire-plug sized Yankee catcher, it is becoming harder to overlook his defensive achievements. When the gong rang for the beginning of the 1959 season, Larry had played 134 consecutive games as a catcher without an error. This figure was only 13 games short of the all-time major league record for handlers of the big mitt.

For all of you Yankee fans keeping close count on the career of this Hall of Fame candidate, the best advice is to leave plenty of space at the bottom of the page . . . the totals aren't in yet.

TEACHER BERRA . . . Yogi shows youngsters the finer arts of catching.

AWARD TIME . . . Commissioner Ford Frick presented Judge Landis Plaque to Berra as 1955's Most Valuable Player. Manager Stengel appears to approve.

ELSTON HOWARD

BORN: Feb. 23, 1929 at St. Louis, Mo. WINTER ADDRESS: Teaneck, N. J. HEIGHT: 6' 2". WEIGHT: 200. BATS and throws right. Married, two children.

When Manager Stengel dreamed up the two-platoon system for the Yanks, he must have known Elston was on the way up. Over the course of the 1958 season, Howard performed in the outfield, at first base and was the "other" catcher.

Officially listed as a catcher, with Berra still in there for about 100 games per season, could be a pretty discouraging designation for the average ball player. But Elston isn't an average ball player. In his combination of jobs last year, he managed to come up with a .314 batting average, enough to lead all regulars on the club.

When Yogi caught all seven games of the World Series, Howard ran off with the Babe Ruth Award, an identification annually given to the outstanding player of the World Series. How did he do it? He took over in left field for the Yanks and managed to come up with at least three plays that saved the classic for the Bronxites.

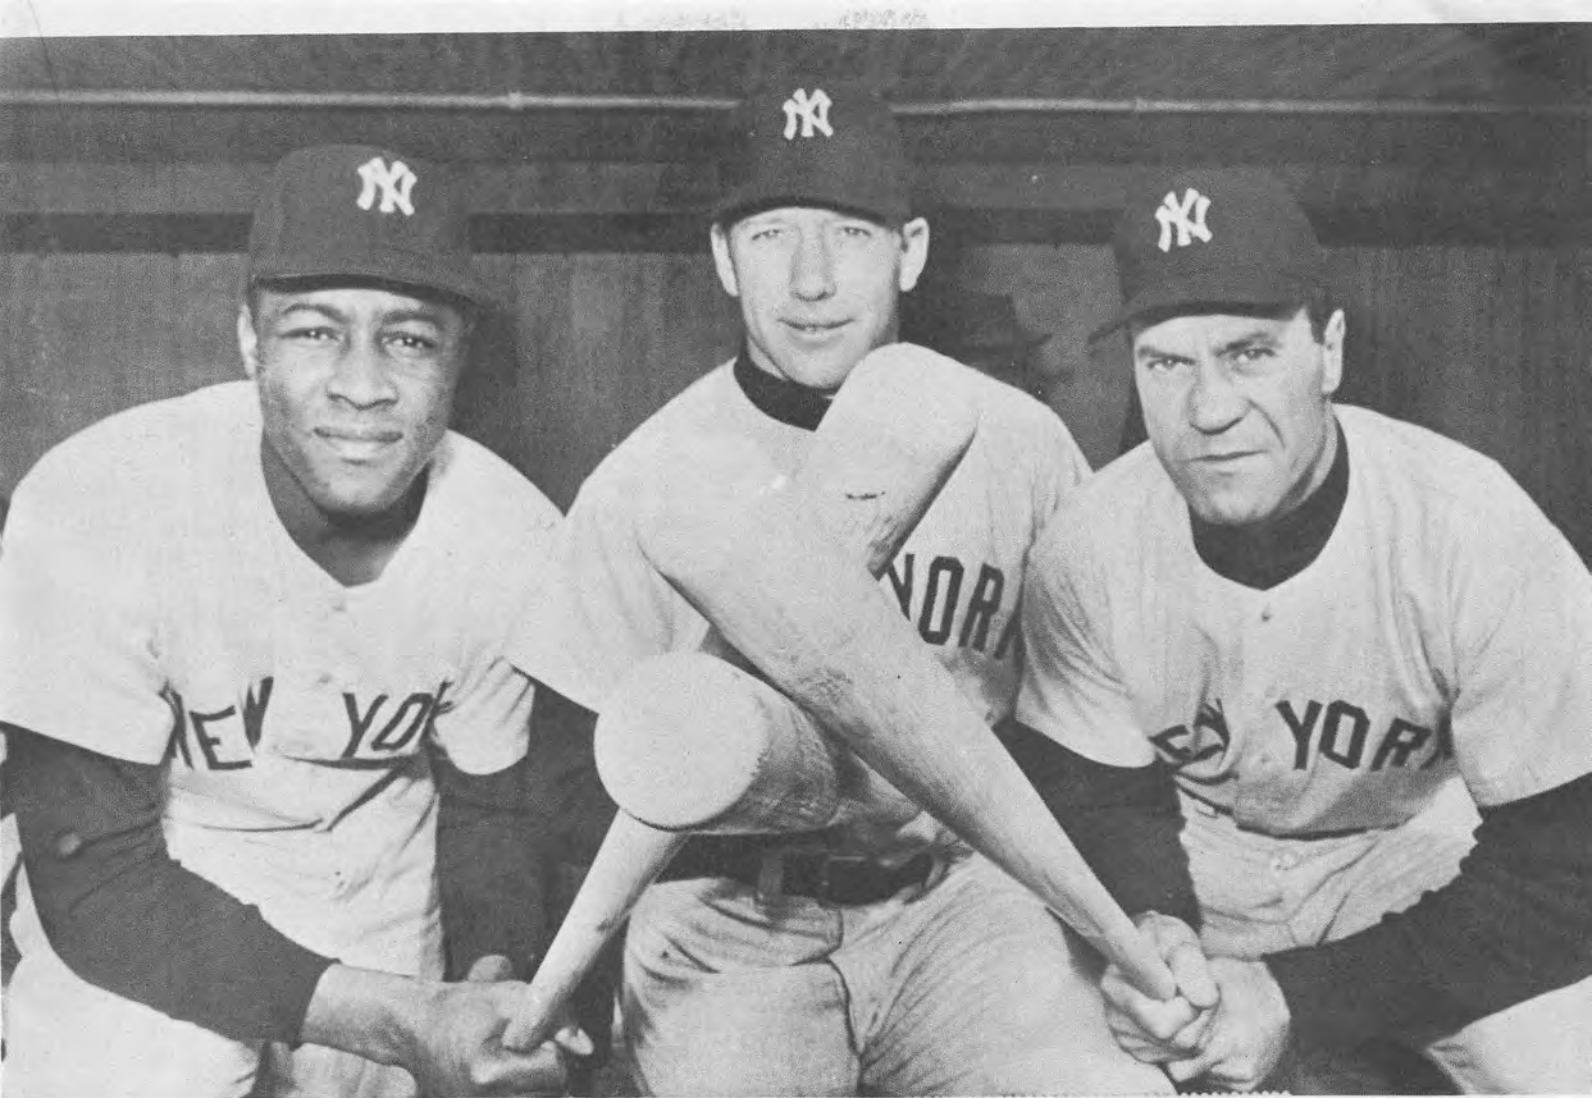

Given one other assignment during the season, Howard came to the plate ten times as a pinch-hitter and delivered for a .556 average.

HANK BAUER

BORN: July 31, 1922 at East St. Louis, Ill.
WINTER ADDRESS: Prairie Village, Kansas.
HEIGHT: 6' 0". WEIGHT: 190. BATS and throws right. Married, four children.

Baseball fans are beginning to think that all big leaguers should have their early training in the U. S. Marines. The testimonial for this is the rugged outfielder for the Yankees. Never a league leader in batting average, Hank Bauer is one of the most feared batsmen in the clutch of any hitter in the league.

If you don't think he saves those big blasts for the right moments, 1958 was a typical example. Over the course of the regular season, playing in 128 games, Bauer hit only twelve home-runs. Came the World Series, a seven-game do-or-die affair, and he got four over the wall. In the course of getting those four home-runs during the October games, he established a new all-time record for Series competitors. Over the 1956-1958 span, Hank hit safely in seventeen consecutive World Series games, with one or more blows in each.

EARLY BIRD . . . with Ass't. Gen. Mgr. Roy Hamey, Bauer uses prop pen to sign his 1959 contract. He was the first Bomber signed for the season.

BORN: May 19, 1928 at San Francisco, Calif.
WINTER ADDRESS: Tenaflly, N. J. HEIGHT:
 6' 1". WEIGHT: 177. BATS and throws right.
Married, four children. Brown hair, blue eyes.

About the only thing that Gil improved on last year over 1957 was his home-run total. It just wasn't a stand-out season for the versatile Yankee infielder. But, before that statistic discourages his fans, the season should be looked at as a whole.

For example, his batting average in the seven-game, 1958 World Series was .321, his career high. He broke up the 1958 All-Star game by driving in the winning run.

When a player is possibly the best man in the league at three positions, he becomes hard to classify. During his career, Gil has led the American League in double-plays at three different spots in the infield; second-base, short-stop, and third-base.

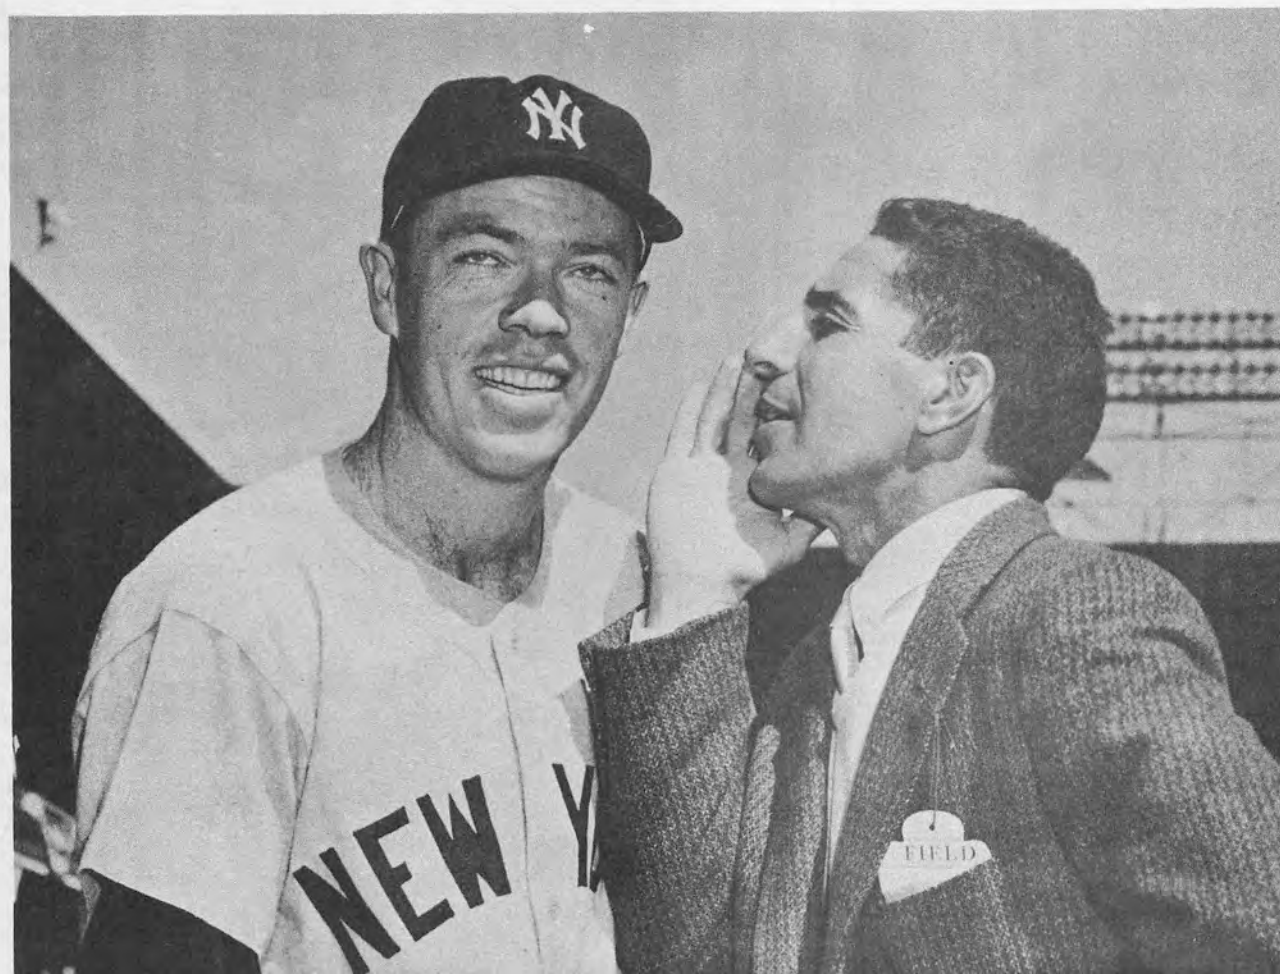

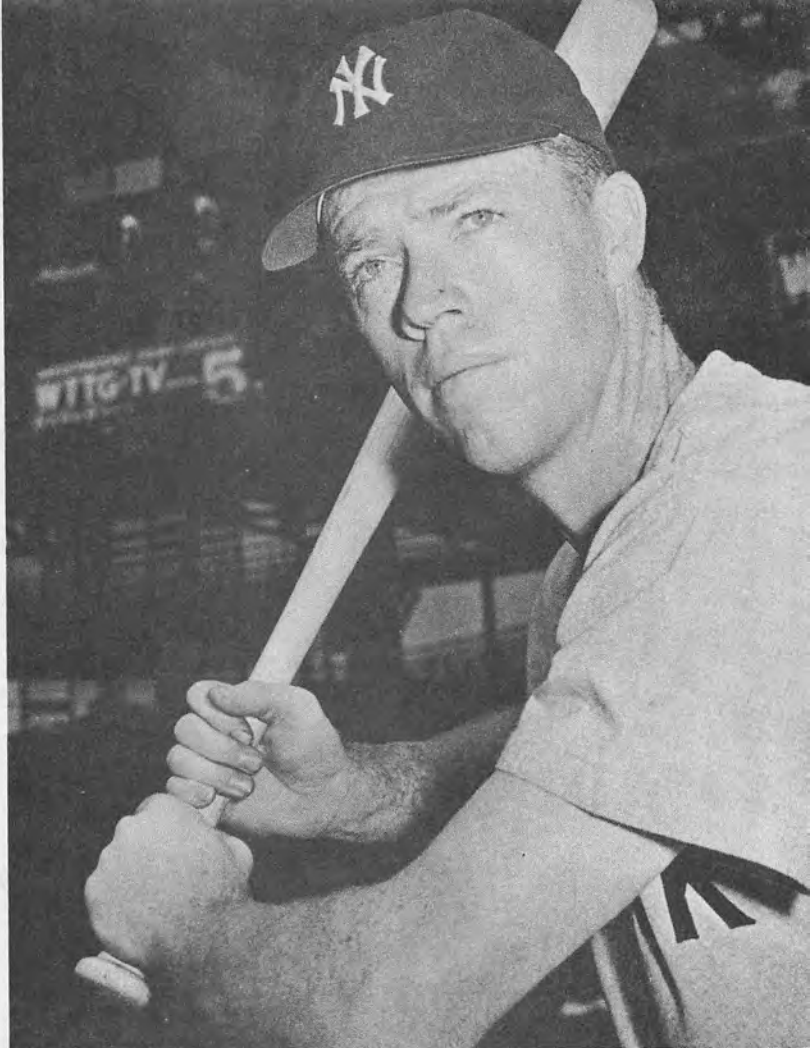

McDougald was one of the early products of the Yankee rapid advancement program for young players. He first came to a Yankee training camp in 1951, assigned to a minor league team. Before October came that year, he not only had made the jump from below AAA classification ball to the majors, but won Rookie of the Year honors.

RYNE DUREN

Just a few innings of pitching with Kansas City in 1957 stood between Ryne Duren and 1958's "Rookie of the Year" award in the American League. Unfortunately, these few innings added up to enough to disqualify the Yank's fireman from rookie status.

Aside from the fact that the bespectacled strike-out artist won six games for the pennant-bound Bombers, he was given credit for saving 18 more. And he comes by that "strike-out artist" title in his own right, too. In only 76 innings pitched, he accounted for 87 strike-outs. On his way to permanency in the big leagues, he had four seasons in which he whiffed more than 200 men in a campaign. His average in this department showed no let-up during the World Series either, as he set back 14 free-swinging Milwaukee hitters by the three-strike method in 9 1/3 innings.

FIREMAN FORM . . . This is the way Ryne Duren throws that blazer that strikes out the opposition.

NORM SIEBERN

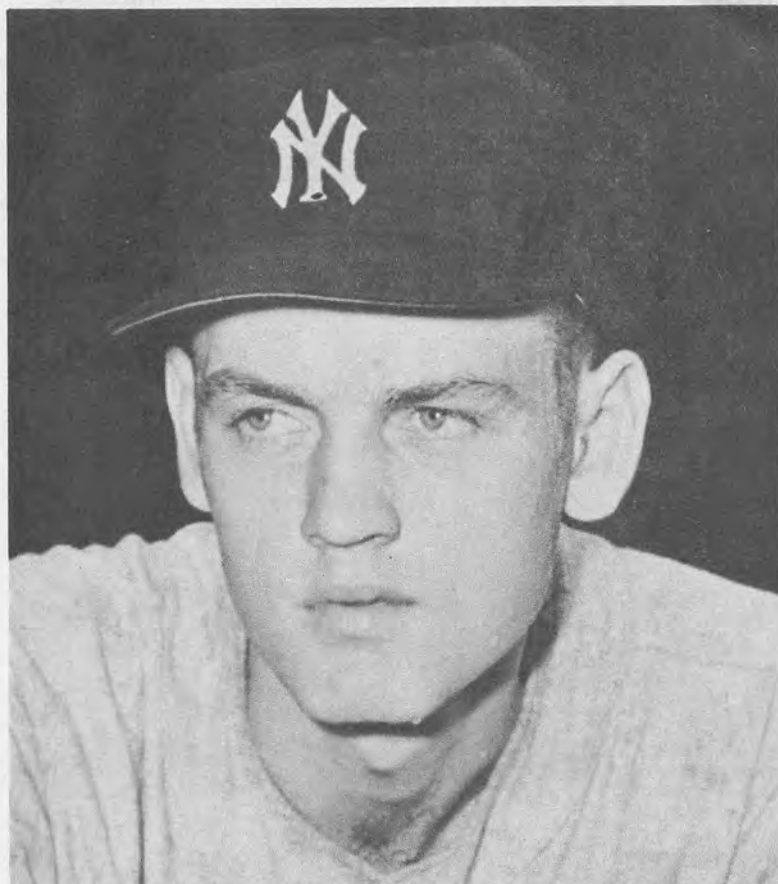

BORN: July 26, 1933 at Wellston, Mo.
WINTER ADDRESS: Denver, Colo. HEIGHT:
Married.

Once again, the Yankees farm system came up with the required answer. Going in to the 1958 season, there were questions asked about "who's in left". Up from Denver in the American Association, where he had led the league in five offensive departments in 1957, came Siebern. On the basis of his record compiled there, he had been named the Minor League Player of the Year.

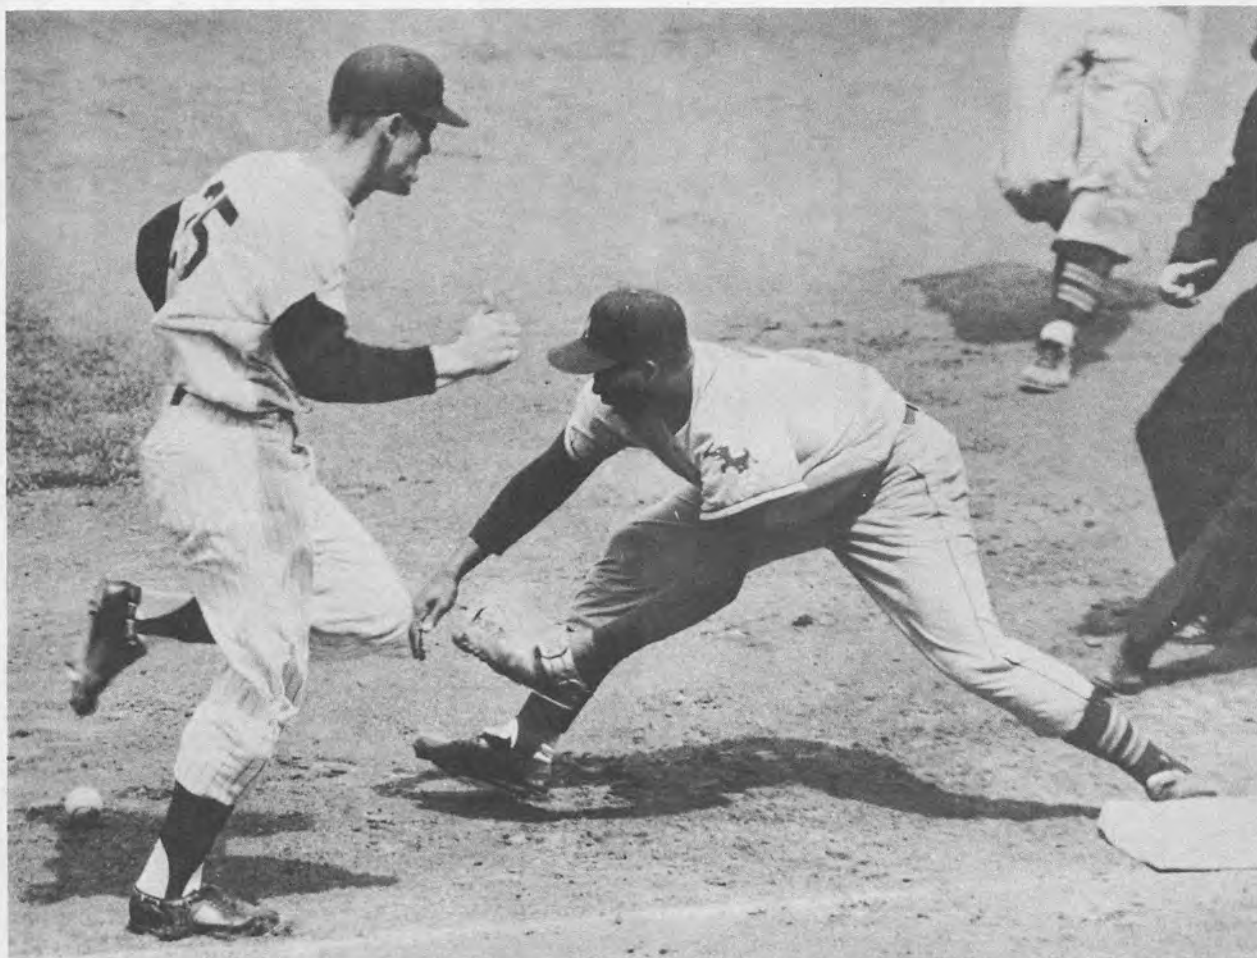

Stepping into the parent club line-up for 134 games last year, this tall rookie batted an even .300. He fulfilled by his performance the prediction that had been made for him two years earlier, when he had been named the outstanding rookie in the Yankee training camp in 1956. An arm injury suffered during that training season probably kept him in the minors at least one more year.

BILL SKOWRON

BORN: Dec. 18, 1930 at Chicago, Ill. WINTER ADDRESS: Hillsdale, N. J. HEIGHT: 6' 0". WEIGHT: 195. BATS and throws right. Married, two children. Black hair, blue eyes.

Perhaps a carry-over of a late 1957 injury plagued the "Moose" during 1958. In any event, for the first time in his professional baseball career, his average dropped below .300, and this after a blazing start from the post in the Spring.

However, no one questions the fact that the big bat wielded by this ex-football fullback is one of the most potent in the Bomber line-up. Even in what must be considered a below par season during 1958, almost one-third of his base hits were for extra bases.

Although hampered by recurring back injuries during parts of the season, Bill managed for the first time in his Yankee tenure to participate in all seven games of the World Series, during which he accounted for two home-runs. This was a fine contrast to 1957, when he could hardly dress for the occasion during post-season play.

ENOS SLAUGHTER

BORN: April 27, 1916 at Roxboro, N. C. WINTER ADDRESS: Roxboro, N. C. HEIGHT: 5' 9" WEIGHT: 191. BATS left, throws right. Married two children.

There's gas left in the old Gas-House Gang as long as "Old Eno" is around to prove the tale. Before completing the 1958 season, Enos Slaughter had rounded out over twenty years in the major leagues, giving credit for the three seasons he missed in military service.

Along the way to this accomplishment of longevity, he backs off to no one in performance. He carries a career batting average of over .300, one of only nine American-League players with more than two years experience to do so. His lifetime total of 2363 hits places him third among active A. L. players. If the man with the hour glass ever catches up with Country, one of the great thrills of baseball will be gone. Watching Slaughter get every inch of base path that can be taken on a hit has been a rare treat to all who have observed.
